

Ahmad Shoaib

Arabic Language and Quranic Studies Medical Student | Islamic Studies Researcher |
mahmadshoaib.com

Ahmad Shoaib is a second-year medical student at the University of Oxford with a strong background in Islamic studies and Arabic language instruction. Born in Pakistan and raised in the UK, he brings a unique bicultural perspective and native fluency in both English and Urdu to his academic and spiritual pursuits.

Ahmad has studied Islam with Al-Mawrid for over a decade, receiving personal mentorship from Dr. Shehzad Saleem and Dr. Sajid Hameed in ‘Aqīdah, Fiqh, and Hadith. His work bridges traditional Islamic scholarship with contemporary intellectual inquiry.

His Arabic training spans more than five years, including:

- Quranic Arabic studies for two years with Ustadh Nouman Ali Khan, focusing on grammar and rhetorical analysis
- Advanced classical Arabic at Al-Mawrid Institute in Lahore, where he studied ancient Arabic poetry under Dr. Sajid Hameed and completed the world’s only English translation of selected poems from Diwan al-Hamāsah
- Modern spoken Arabic immersion over three years in Saudi Arabia

Ahmad’s teaching style emphasizes clarity, contextual understanding, and a love for the Arabic language as a gateway to the Qur’an. He shares reflections on faith, philosophy, and personal growth at mahmadshoaib.com.